WREN – Rural Internet Update
Evan Nemeth of the Western Regional Enterprise Network (WREN) stated Municipally owned internet that can provide a solution to its residents is something he has been looking into for 7 years. Backbone internet and middle mile internet were the initial goals. Backbone internet acts as a road into the community, but the ‘driveway’ for residents is required, which is known as ‘middle mile’ internet. The original intent was that WREN would set up the infrastructure and internet providers would then use that infrastructure as an economically attractive means to bring internet to rural communities. Due to funding not being available, the original hope is no longer considered feasible.

WREN has been working closely with the major internet providers and they have a sense of what the solutions may be, and this will be discussed further during the on-camera confidential discussion with the councillors at the end of the meeting.
